Our first session showed that with solid planning, supporting the mission of a not-for-profit corporation is some of the most rewarding work an attorney can do. This second one-hour session refers to those basics, and covers some advanced considerations--and red flags--when advising a not-for-profit corporation on formation issues in New York, and presents "ten tips" for an attorney wanting to be an engaged and generative member of a not-for-profit board; a great resource for any attorney considering board service.
