FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE:

Historical Society of the New York Courts Is on the Road Across New York State with the Lemmon Slave Case Exhibit

White Plains, NY (October 3, 2022) — During the fall in 2021, the Historical Society of the New York Courts, in collaboration with the New York State Courts, began a 90-week tour to 45 courthouses across New York State of The Lemmon Case: 1852-1860, A Prelude to the Civil War. This panel exhibit of the landmark Court of Appeals case features a video narration by James Earl Jones with an introduction by Chief Judge Janet DiFiore. The exhibit is intended to educate the public on the role of the New York courts in paving the way for the abolition of slavery. Through the facts of the case, we learn how the courts helped free eight enslaved young women and children who sailed into New York harbor with their owners from Virginia. The New York courts' ruling was in direct conflict with the Supreme Court's Dred Scott decision of 1857, and it represented the most unyielding statement made against slavery by any court in the United States prior to the Civil War. The exhibit is currently on display at the Erie County Courthouse in the Eighth Judicial District (Erie County Court Building, 25 Delaware Avenue, Buffalo, NY 14202) and will remain there for two weeks until it travels to its next stop, the Niagara County Courthouse, arriving on October 17th.

Visit the Historical Society's website at history.nycourts.gov/the-lemmon-slave-case to watch the film and see the tour schedule.

President of the Historical Society and former Chief Judge Jonathan Lippman said: "The Historical Society of the New York Courts is proud to highlight this historic case at a time when the nation wrestles with issues of racial bias and access to justice."

All visitors to New York State Unified Court System courthouses and other court facilities are required to follow all UCS COVID-19 protocols and mask rules prominently displayed at every public entrance.
